

04-07

back! It is you who must be our king because no one can fly as high as you." "Except me!" cried a shrill, shrill voice, and out of the blue the little bird without a name rose from the eagle's back, where he had lain hidden in the feathers. His guile was the ace up his sleeve and he laughed to himself at how easy it had been to outwit the other