04-16

am king!" so that the owl could hear him as he flew, but thought better of it. From this time on, the owl, fooled by the little bird, has not dared to show himself by day for fear the birds should beat the living daylights out of him. He flies about only at night-time, hating and pursuing not the bird, but the mouse for having