09-15

Crowds that a British journalist Charles Mackay wrote. That crowds of people often behave irrationally was the main thesis of the book, and tulip mania was one of the primary examples. According to Mackay, at one point twelve acres of land were offered for a Semper Augustus bulb. He claims that many such