may not have constituted a bubble. Research on the tulip mania is difficult because of the limited data from the 1630s. However, some modern economists have proposed rational explanations, rather than a speculative mania, for the rise and fall in prices. For example, other flowers, such as the hyacinth, also had high