

04-13

up the little bird in the mouse's hole that the mouse gave up most unwillingly, and bade the owl watch him carefully night and day. Then all the birds went home to bed, for they were very tired, but the owl assigned by the birds to stand guard found his job was lonely and wearisome because he was just sitting alone staring at the mouse's hole. I can