01-07

there was one huntsman, who was still wet behind the ears, who decided the prize was worth a shot in spite of the boar's reputation. The huntsman discovered the boar preferred to come out in the middle of the day. So, he went to the wood by the well with his good bow, to bide his time. Around noontime, the boar,