09-16

Mackay, at one point twelve acres of land were offered for a Semper Augustus bulb. He claims that many such investors ruined by the fall in prices were desperate, and Dutch commerce suffered a severe shock. In Mackay's account, the panicked tulip speculators sought help from the government of the Netherlands, which