responded by declaring that anyone who had bought contracts to purchase bulbs in the future could void their contract by payment of a ten percent fee. Attempts that were made to resolve the situation to the satisfaction of all parties were unsuccessful. The mania finally ended, Mackay says, with individuals stuck