of others. Tics are often worse with excitement or anxiety and better during calm, focused activities. Certain physical experiences can trigger or worsen tics. For example, tight collars may trigger neck tics, or hearing another person sniff or throat-clear may trigger the production of similar