10-18

early family studies suggested an autosomal dominant mode of inheritance characterized the condition, more recent studies discovered the pattern of inheritance was much more complex. Although there may be a few genes that have substantial effects, it's also possible that many genes with smaller effects and environmental factors may