

04-11

however, that if he played his cards right, he could be king. How the goose wallowed in the sand, and the duck strove to dig a hole for the new task! All the other birds tried to hide themselves in the ground, too, until they were practically blue in the face. The nameless little bird that was as bold as brass found a pitch dark